0.0.1 The Vigilance Chapter

Vigilance is the path to the deathless, negligence is the path to death; 21 the vigilant ones do not die, the negligent ones are as [already] dead.

The wise one having known this distinction in vigilance; 22 rejoices in vigilance, delighting in the pasture of the noble ones.

The meditators who are constantly and continuously energetic; 23 those wise ones attain nibbana, the unsurpassed release from bondage.

For the mindful and strenuous one, for the one whose actions are pure, acting considerately; 24 for the discerning one living the life of Dhamma, for that vigilant one, glory ever grows.

By effort and vigilance, by discipline and [self] taming; 25 let the wise one be an island [onto oneself], which no flood can submerge.

The foolish ignorant population devote themselves to negligence; 26

but the wise protects vigilance, as his best treasure.

Do not devote yourself to negligence, do not delight in sensual pleasures and intimacy; 27 indeed the vigilant one [always] meditating, attains abundant happiness.

When a wise one expels negligence with vigilance; 28
having ascended the palace of wisdom, sorrowless in a sorrowful population;
just like the wise one standing on a mountain [top], looks down at the fools on the ground.

Vigilant among the negligent, wide-awake among the sleeping [masses]; 29 the wise ones advance, just like a swift horse having abandoned the weak horse.

It was with vigilance that Inda arrived at supremacy over the devas; 30 the [wise] praise vigilance, negligence is ever blamed.
